Perfect for lessons

ANDREW Gould, 24, rode for Britain at five European dressage championships as a young rider. He started out 16 years ago on a Shetland pony called Miss Ellie, whom he shared with his brother and four cousins.

"Fortunately, they all gave up," he recalls.

"I left school at 15 without doing all my exams and went to work for David Hunt. Watching him and riding different horses was great training."

Andrew competed internationally up to grand prix level with Koffee Break, who is now living out his retirement with his companion, Koffee Mate.

"He'll always be my favourite," says Andrew.

Andrew recently married Polly Tipton, and they have a young son, Oliver. Together, they run Priory Dressage, in Surrey.

His usual clothes: "I have two pairs of breeches I always wear — Pikeur and Kentucky. I wear my Konig long leather boots on the yard every day and I have a pair of Kyra K gloves to ride in."

On his new looks: "The styles and colours were pretty much what I would have chosen myself. I really like the browns and darker colours. I've never bought half-chaps before. I have my Konig boots because I'm always riding if I'm on the yard."

"The half-chaps are actually really good because they're easy to whip off in between lessons or if you've got to jump in the car to go and teach. It means I don't have to keep changing shoes to drive. And the Georg Schumacher jacket is great. I live in that now."

Andrew wears Caldene Aspen jacket in chocolate, £89.95; Rodney Powell Viscount breeches in tapenade, £56; Barbour polo shirt, £35; Ariat Devon Pro paddock boots in cordovan, £159.95; Ariat Classic Chap II in cordovan; £84.99

Andrew wears Barbour men's long-sleeved shirt, £33; Pikeur Laurin jacket, £76; Pikeur Rodrigo men's breeches in brown, £110; Ariat Devon Pro paddock boots in cordovan, £159.95; Ariat Close-Contact Half-Chaps, £89.99

Andrew wears Georg Schumacher Seattle Jacket in rubber, £125.95; Pikeur Rodrigo breeches in brown, £110; Ariat Devon Pro paddock boots in cordovan, £159.95; Ariat Close-Contact Half-Chaps in cordovan, £89.99
